ST. MARKS PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

St. Marks Presbyterian Church is a historic African American church established in Rogersville, TN in 1875.

The church building built in 1912 is located at the junction of N. Hassen and W. Kyle Streets in Rogersville. It is renowned for its decorative patterned fish scale shingles; an architectural style uncommon in East Tennessee.

There are two front entrances to the building; the western door was originally for women and the eastern door was for men. Men and women formerly sat separately during services.

St. Marks dissolved in 2002 and the building was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 2006 for its importance to the local African American community and as a "fine example of 20th-century Shingle Style architecture".
